

Monday 23rd November 4pm – Maynooth University Psychology Department

Dr. Frank Doyle (Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland)

Fashion, bias and nonsense in (health) psychology: A tale of two systematic reviews.

Dr Frank Doyle is a senior lecturer in psychology in RCSI. He coordinates and teaches behavioural sciences and statistics to health professionals at both undergraduate and postgraduate levels. He is the Associate Editor of Health Psychology and Behavioral Medicine: An Open Access Journal, and has also acted as a statistical consultant on several research projects. He has published in prestigious international journals on areas such as depression, cardiovascular disease, diabetes, cardiac rehabilitation, health behaviours such as smoking and physical activity, quality of life, pain and stress. He is also interested in systematic reviews, meta-analyses and psychometrics. He was Chair of the Psychological Society of Ireland's Division of Health Psychology from 2013-2015.