

Thursday 9th February 4pm – Maynooth University Psychology Department

Dr. Ronan Foley (Department of Geography, Maynooth University)

Enabling Health in Place: Can Geography and Psychology work together more effectively?

Ronan Foley is a senior lecturer in the Department of Geography at Maynooth. His research interests follow two main strands. One interest is in the area of GIS and Health Care Planning, with particular attention on accessibility and utilisation, health care service planning, mental health and inequalities in general. His other core research interest is in the area of therapeutic landscapes, with a focus on water and place and the developing research area of healthy blue space. Ronan has been a PI or Co-PI on a wide range of funded research including current projects funded by the Environmental Protection Agency and the UK's Economic and Social Research Council.
